The Amazing Adventure of Allen!

Created by: Allen

Written and Illustrated by: Miles Smith

This book was written for Allen, a first grader of Mrs. Peewee's first grade class. The book was about Allen, a boy in a "Minecraft"-like setting and goes on an adventure to rescue his family with an unlikely friend, friendship and family are important and great lengths are too small a distance Allen would go to save them. Making friends and helping others, especially your family, is an important aspect of life. I hope Allen and anyone else to enjoy this book written for adventure and teaching about important parts of everyone's life.

Thank you,

Miles Smith-Writer, illustrator

And creator and star,

Allen

Page 1: Allen woke up from his sleep to find strange surroundings, for instead of his home, he was in a Forest with a chest by him. He found a pick axe in it. He wondered where his family was, so he set out to find them. Allen was only 7 years old but he knew he could find his family. He didn't know where he was exactly but he was determined to get back to his family!

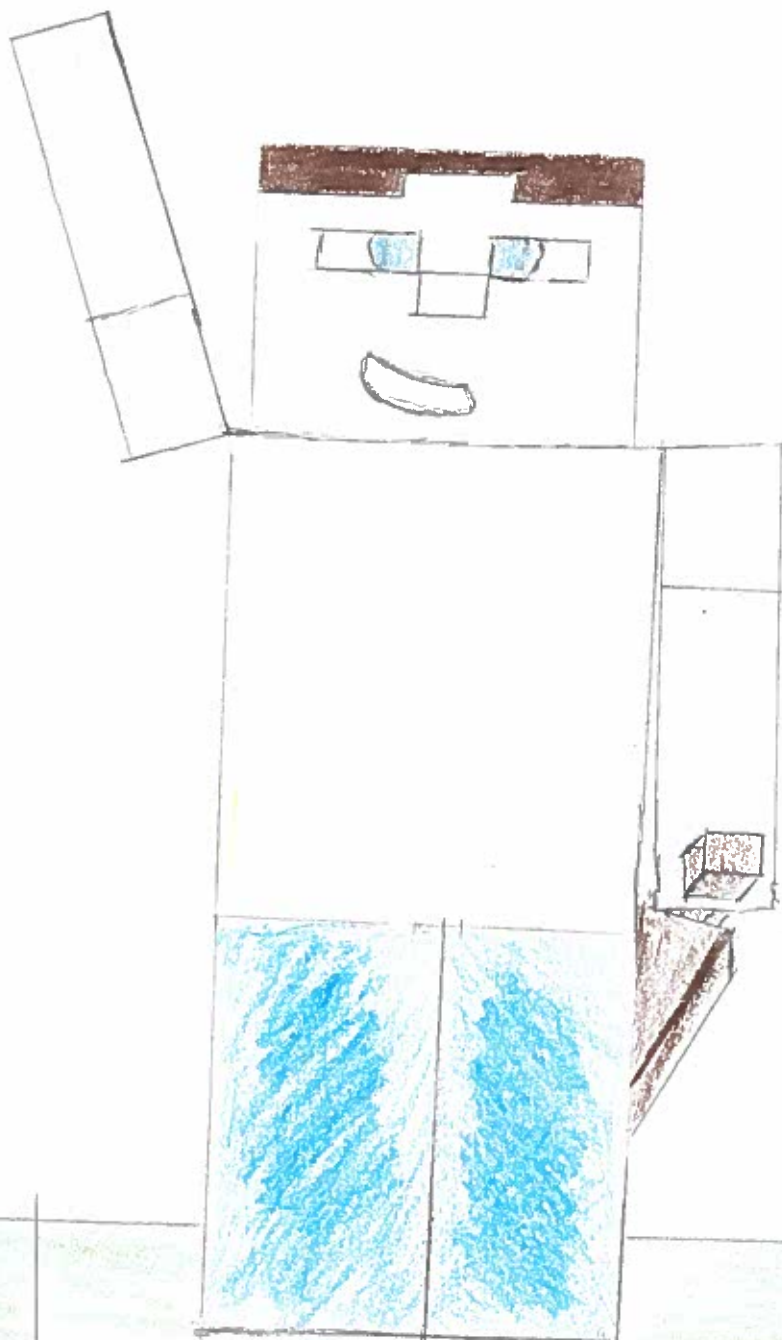

Page 2: As he was walking he found a stranger. The stranger wore blue jeans, and a white shirt, carrying a gleaming sword in his hand. He looked happy to see Allen, and Allen was happy to see another person.

"Hello! I am Stan! A fellow adventurer like you," Exclaimed Stan.

"Hi, Stan, my name is Allen, and I am in search of my family, friends and village, for I have lost them." said Allen, sounding brave and bold, wanting to find them more than anything else in the world.

"Well then, I will gladly offer my services!" Stan said quite loudly. And with that they were off to find his family and friends.

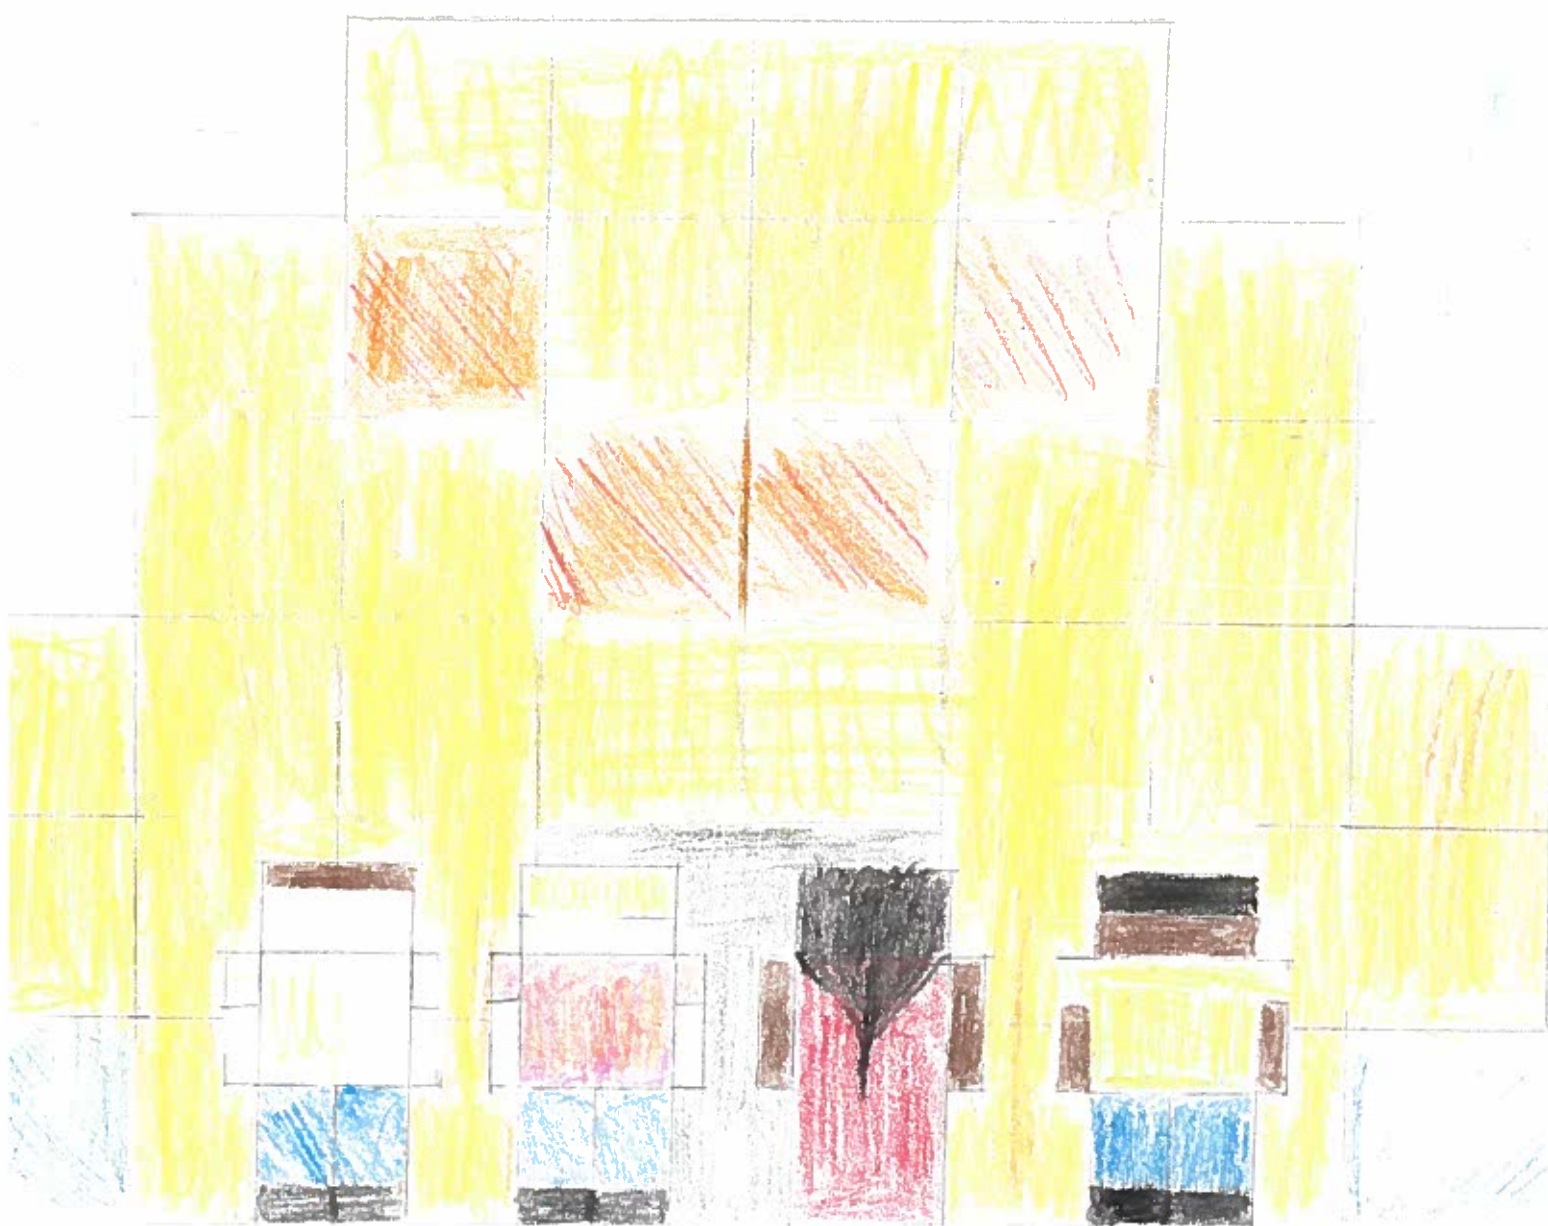

Page 3: After hours of venturing they heard voices, and so they were drawn towards them. In a clearing in the woods, they saw Allen's mother and his friend Boen. They were greeted with cries of joy from both parties, but after a while they went off to find the others and their home.

Page 4: The four of them were treading through the forest when they walked passed the last tree that made The Forrest, and where greeted by two big mountains and a big stone wall between them. Luckily, Allen was skilled with a pick axe and he dug his way through placing torches in there. Night was nearly upon them so the blocked the other entrance and Allen would finish the rest of the tunnel the next day.

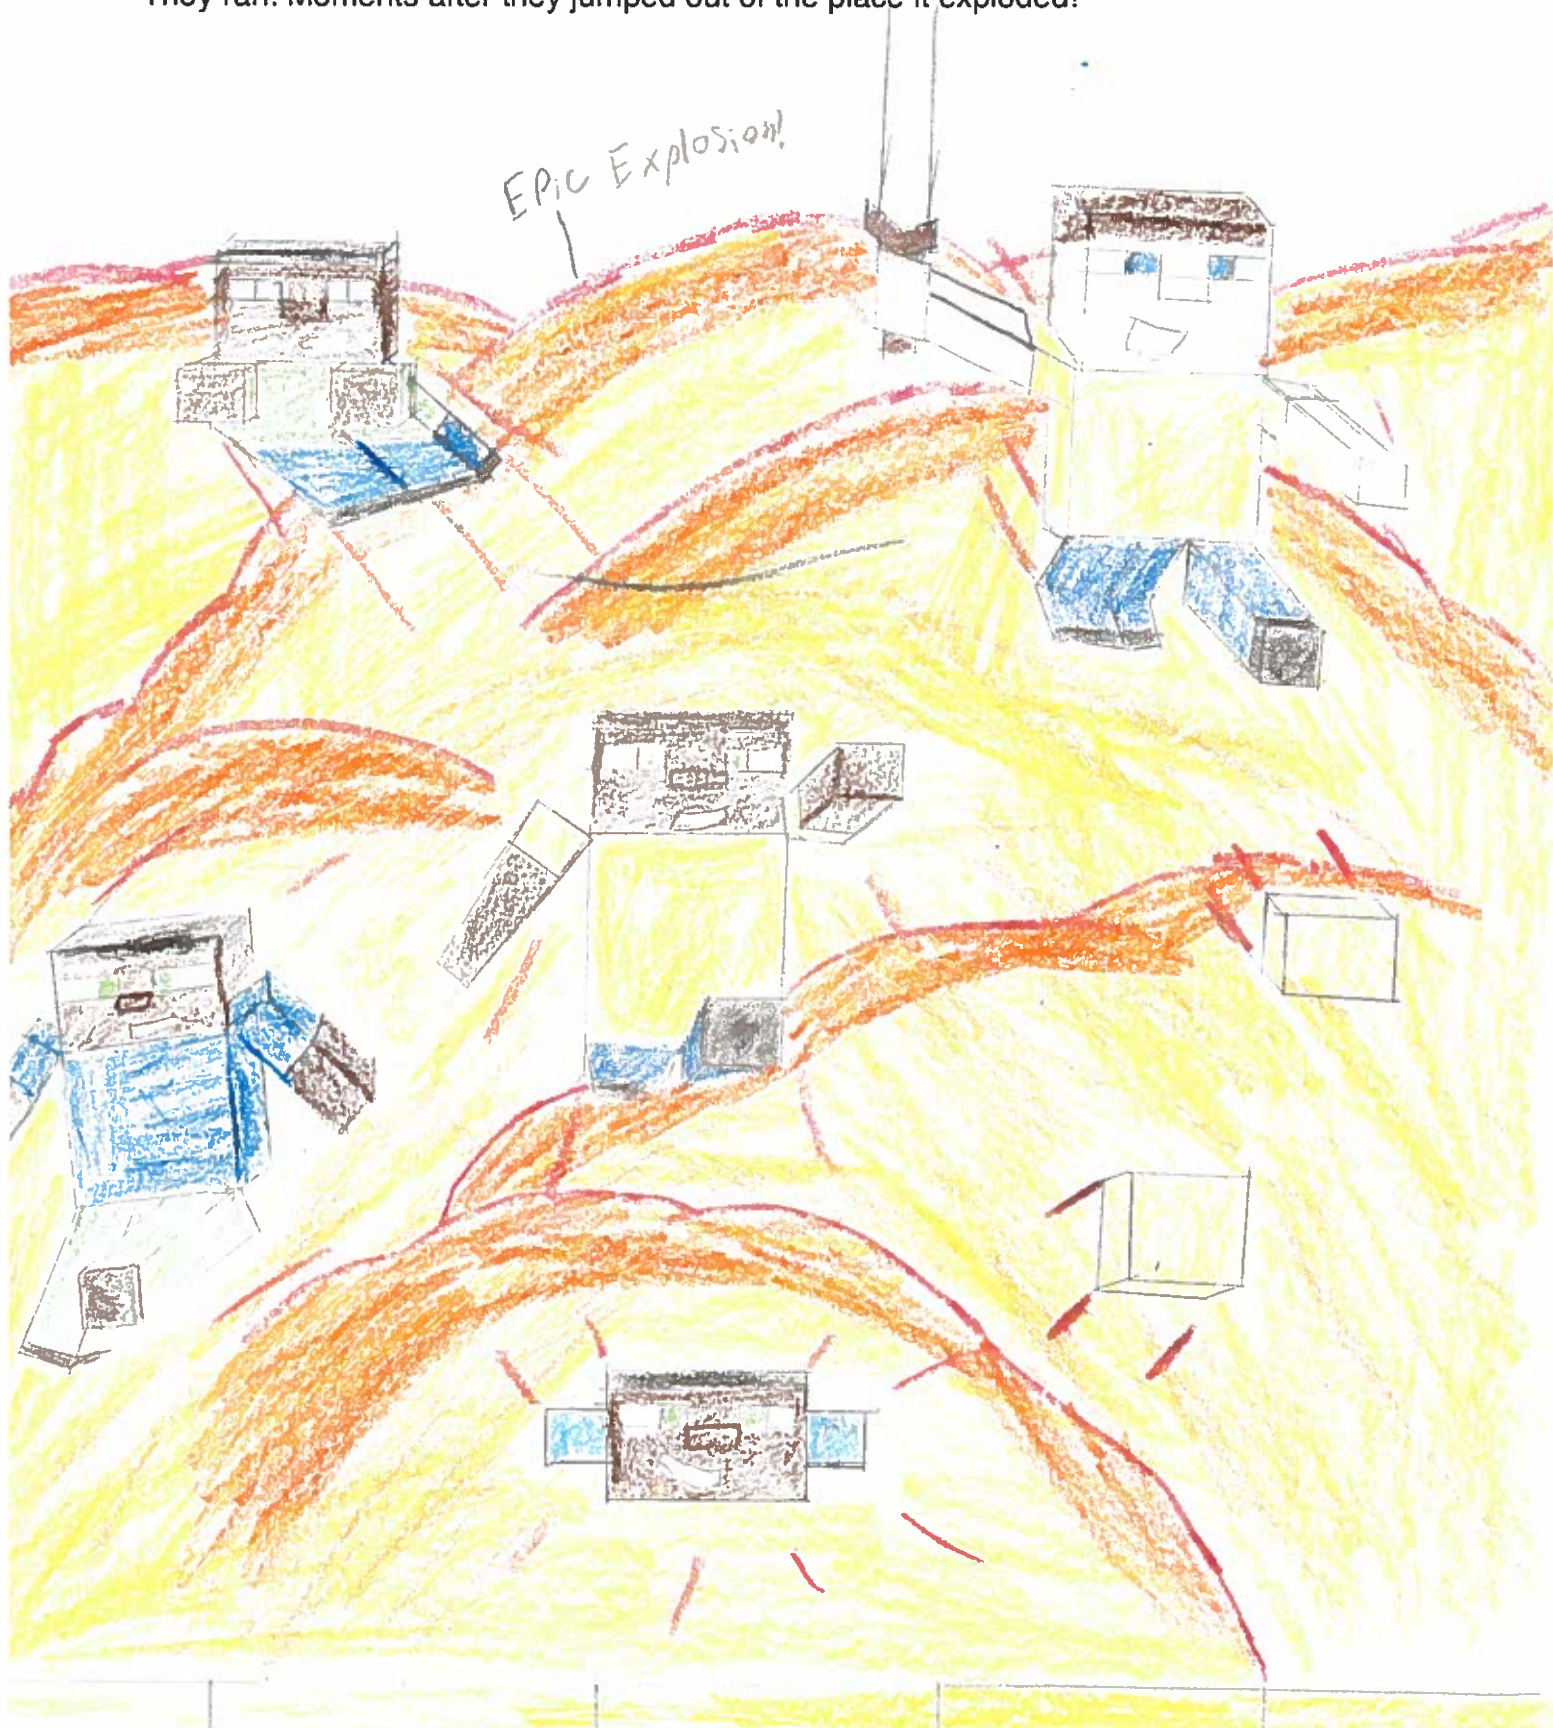

Page 5: Morning came and they rose and it only took ten minutes to get to the other side. There, on the other side, they saw their beautiful desert where their home has always been! They scurried off into the golden sand, where they, again, walked a lot. Then strangely, they came across a great pyramid. Allen and Stan went to investigate it.

Page 6: They entered it and saw amazing carved sand stone. Then they heard yells from...beneath the floor? They hurried over to the middle, where the sounds where coming from and saw a pattern of wool in the floor. The middle was red. So Allen, the braver of the two, decided to destroy one of the outer blue wool block beneath him. And he dropped all the time at down with a clump.

Page 7: After getting up he found himself in a room, with his friend Kenesh and brothers on the other side of a mysterious tile on the floor...He called for a ladder down, and soon enough they were half way up the long walls. And as they got up, something fell out of his younger brother's pocket and landed on the tile. The tile started to glow. They ran! Moments after they jumped out of the place it exploded!

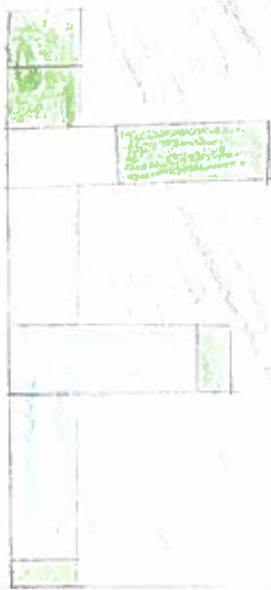

Page 8: As they continued, now a large group of seven, they came across a village: their village! They greeted each other with warm hugs and they got warm cookies back too! But Allen and Stan didn't stay long, for the plains were just a while away, and they needed to find the others.

Page 9: Two days later they found themselves in the Great Plains where horses and cattle roamed. They befriended a donkey and horse, which they now rode to travel and the time there was great, until night fell.

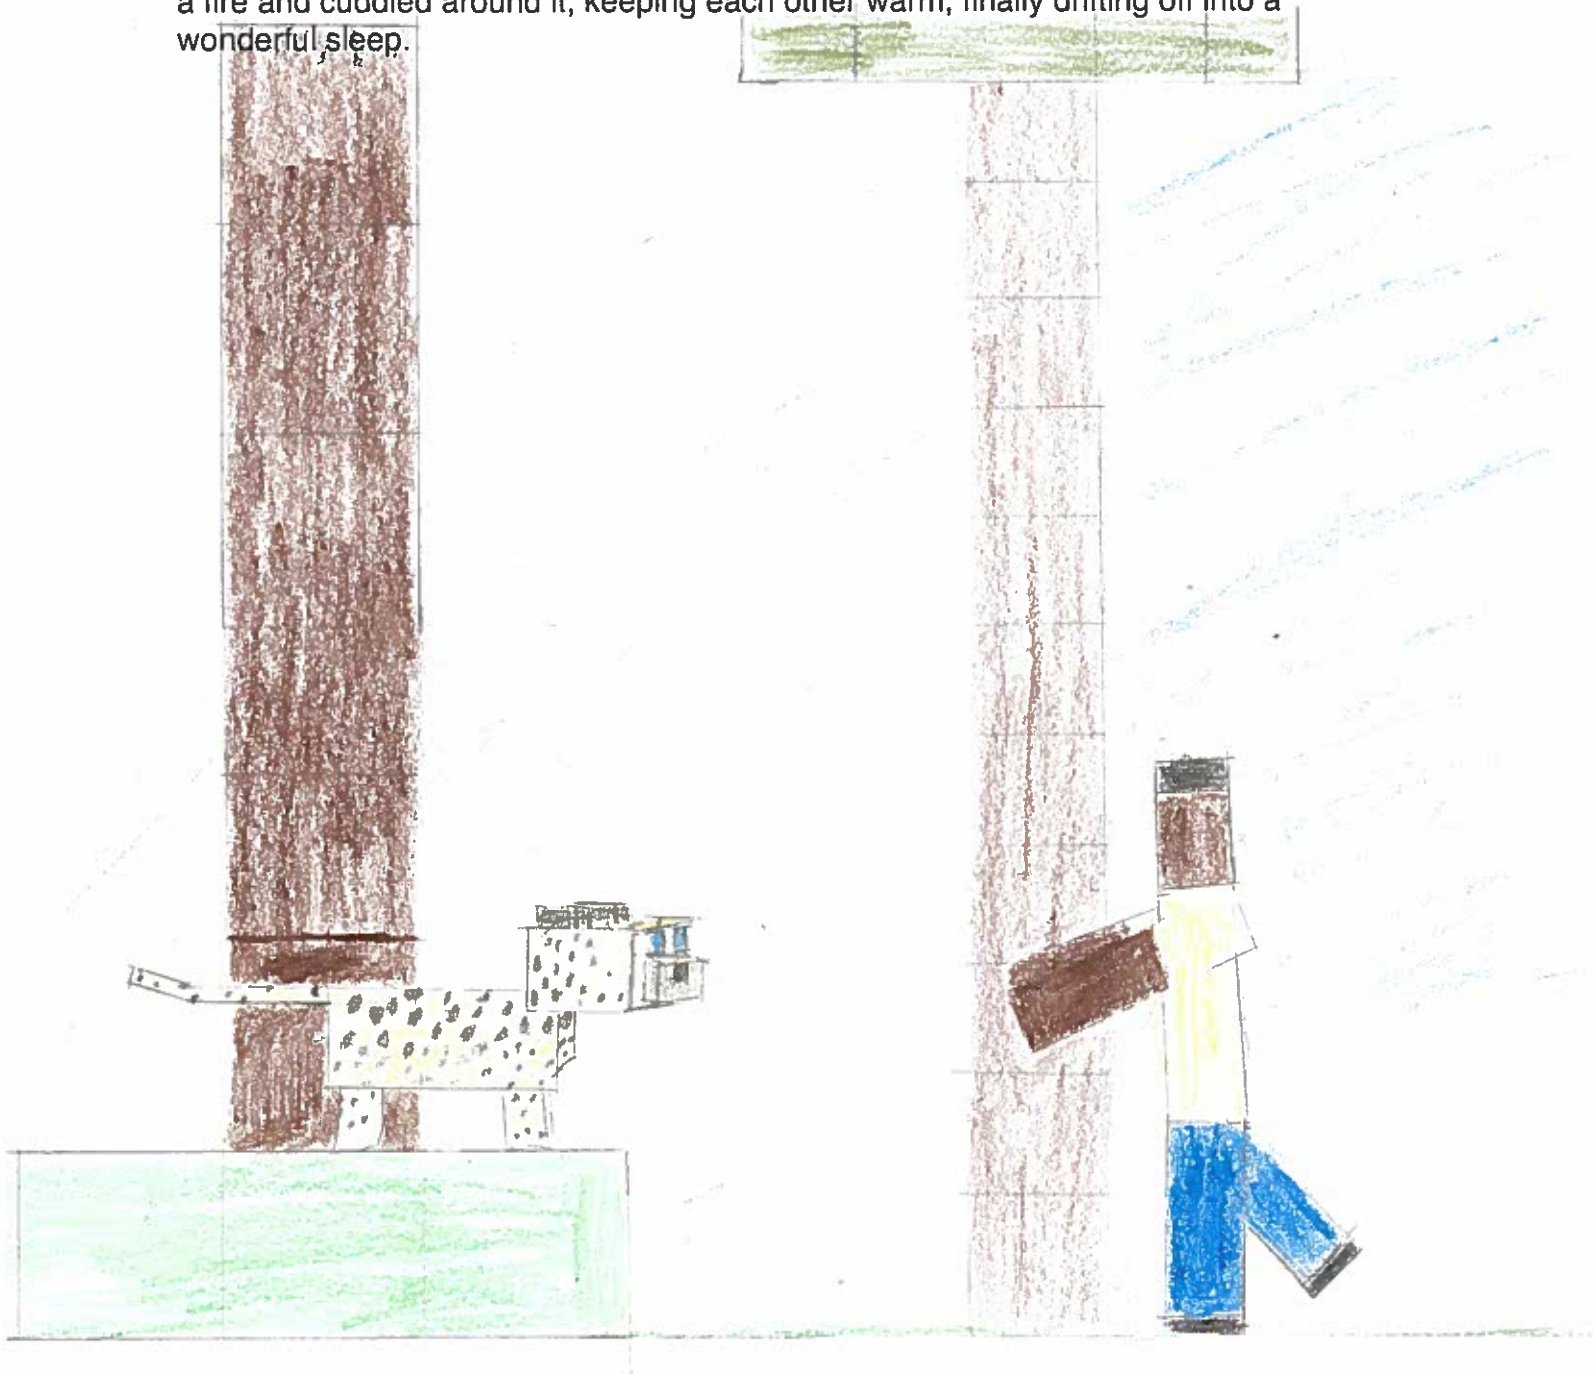

Page 10: They started a campfire and ate marshmallows but that didn't last long when out behind a hill a zombie came. Stan drew his sword while Allen packed up their things; more zombies were coming. Stan fended off the gnarly zombie but it ran off while two more came. Allen readied his donkey and Stan's horse, but Stan stood his ground.

Page 11: "Go Allen! Save your father, I shall fend off these zombies! Trust me, I know what I'm doing! And Allen, I wish you good luck." Stan said hastily. Allen hesitated but knew he had to go, so he and his donkey, Jimmy, went off into the Jungle, the Jungle of Green. Allen looked back only once and saw a creeper coming towards Stan, but Stan was much faster than any old creeper.

Page 12: In the jungle he found a cheetah. Luckily it was very nice and after some food it followed Allen and his donkey everywhere. They eventually made it out, and entered The Forrest of Winter, where cold came faster than a blinding arrow. They made a fire and cuddled around it, keeping each other warm, finally drifting off into a wonderful sleep.

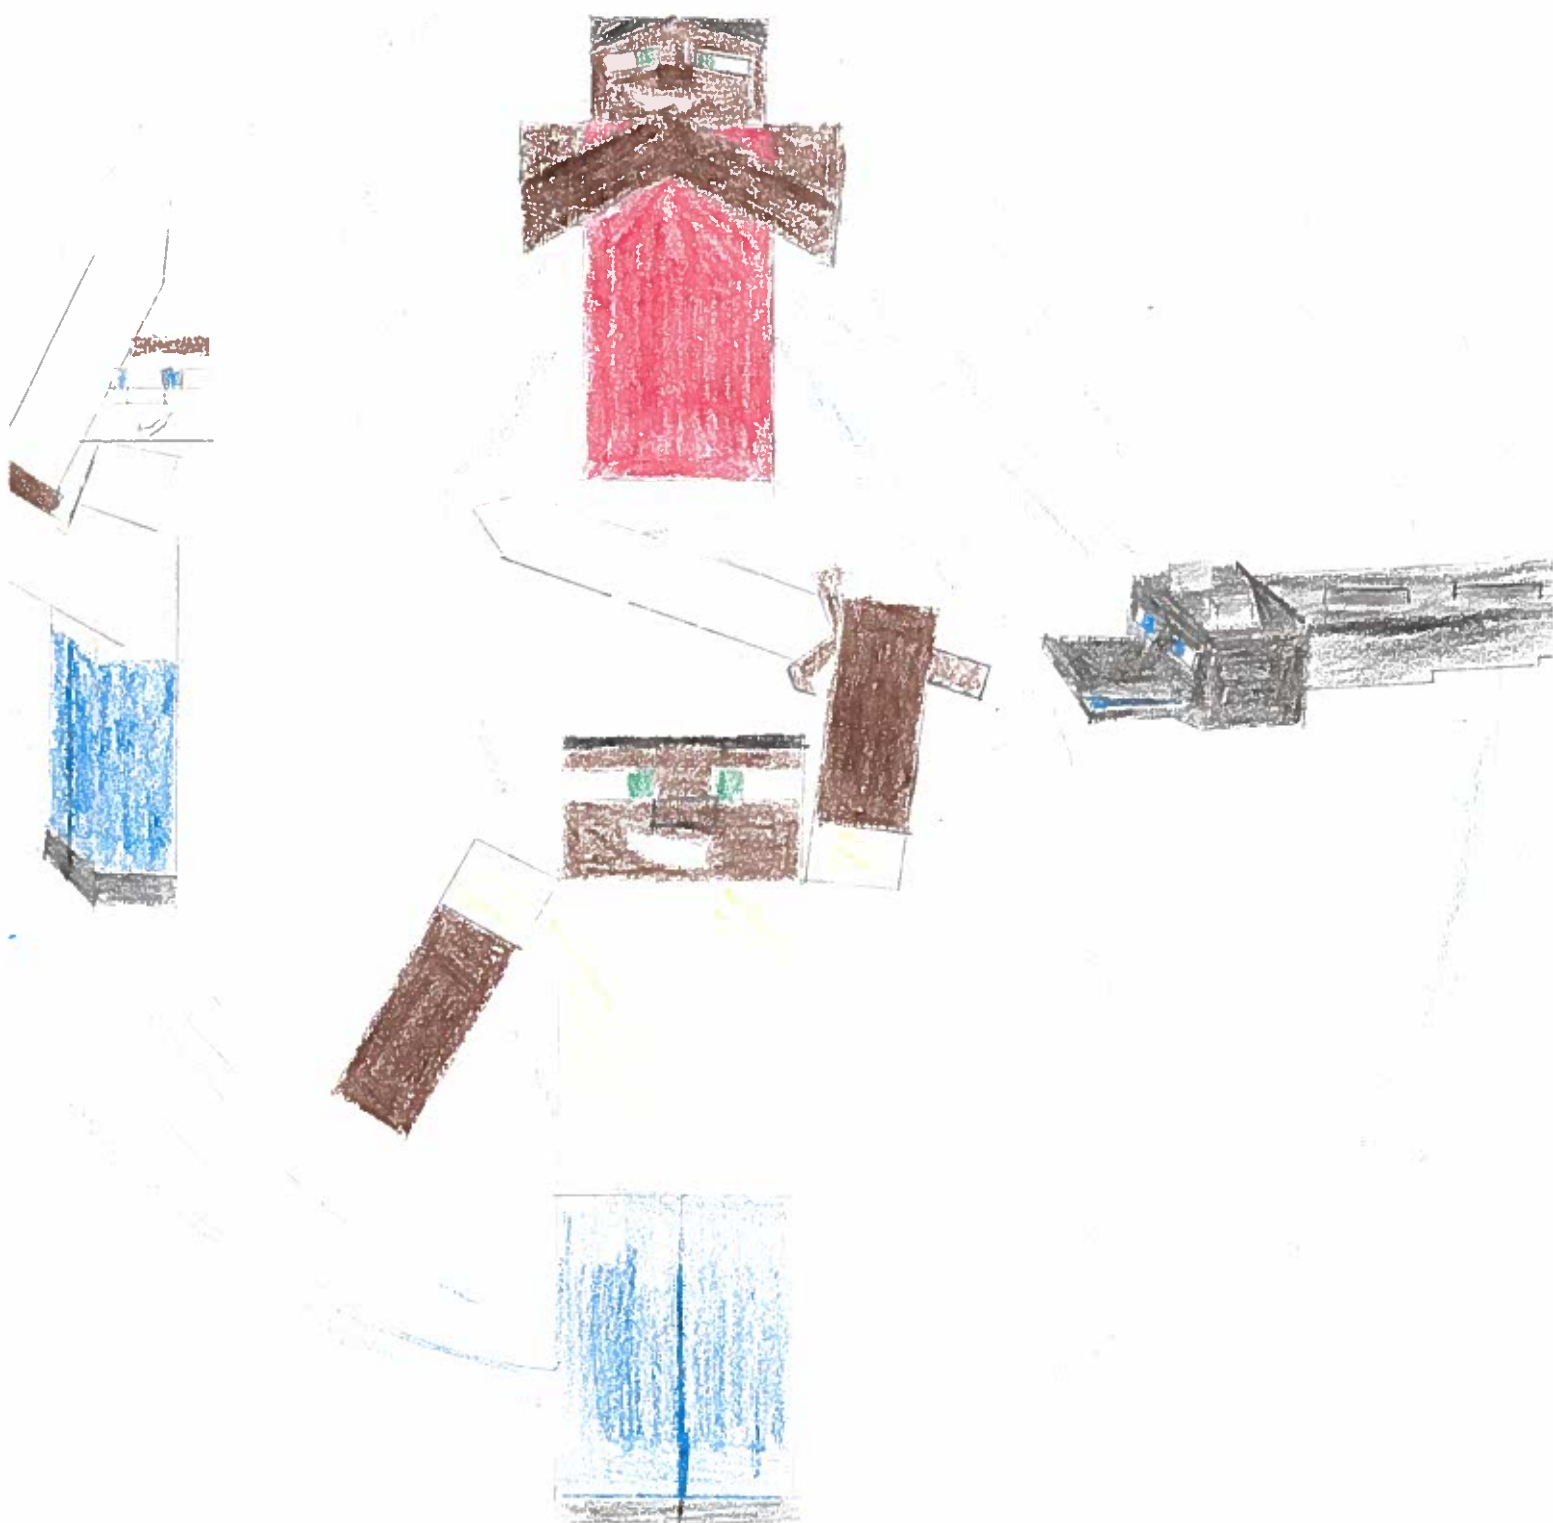

Page 13: The adventure continued with a fresh start and warm mutton. They enjoyed the snow and had many snowball fights and clambered magnificent trees. But they still couldn't find Allen's father...until two days later.

Page 14: They came to another clearing, and there Allen saw his dad and man in a strange blue cloak with stars on it and a giant pointy hat, and a diamond sword I hovering above a pile of stone. Allen and his dad hugged each other upon meeting and the wizard spoke to Allen, "Allen, I am the wizard of this land, and you will be its guardian. Just claim this sword and it will defeat the dark power that separated you from your family." But as he finished, a big black DRAGON came swooping down and sent out fire.

Page 15: Everyone except Allen hid behind a tree. Allen cautiously approached the dragon. He put his hand on the dragon snout and the dragon settled down, rolled over on its back and was very excited when Allen rubbed its belly, so excited it licked Allen, who was then covered with slobber. But Allen they got the diamond sword and was made guardian. They returned home happy and spread their new kingdom to all different regions, even the jungle. Stan was even found alive and became second in command. And they all were again together and happy, Allen the greatest hero ever.
