There was a small town called Cattsburg. It was a peaceful town, and everyone was friends. They were named the happiest place in the world by the "Daily Meow".

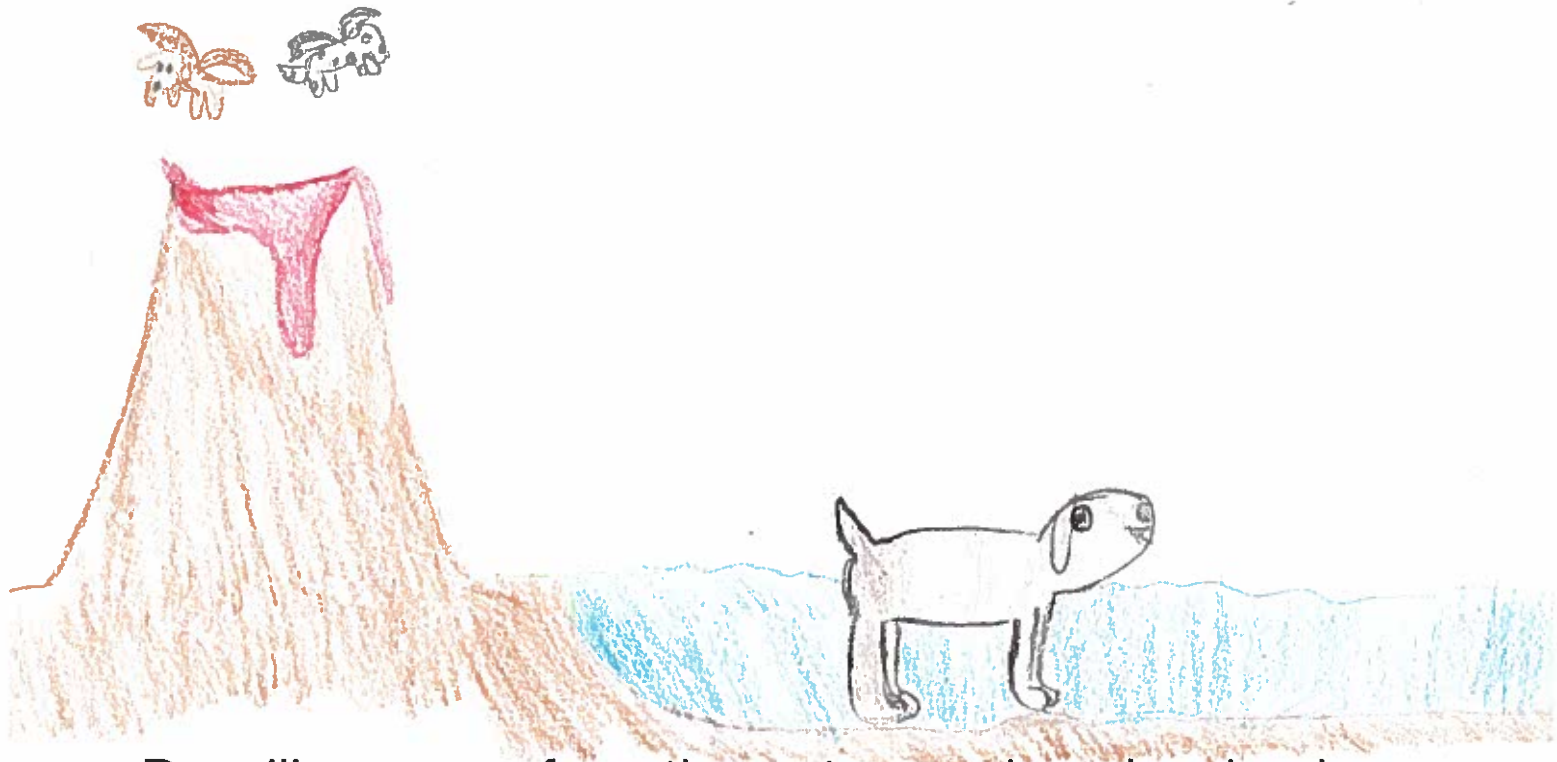

Next to Cattsburg there was a big lake. It was big, blue, and had lots of fish in it. No one ever thought there would be anyone living in it. They would soon find out that they were wrong.

It was 4th of July and the cats decided to celebrate. They bought a ton of fireworks and set them off. They had a great time playing and watching the fireworks.

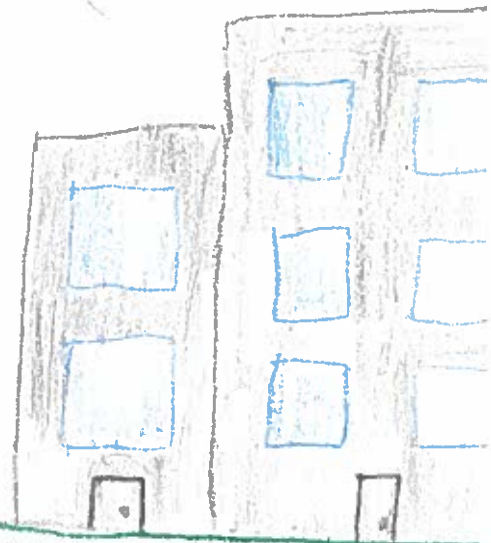

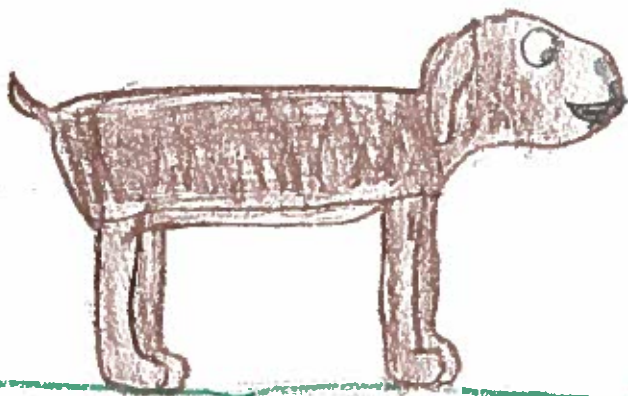

Below the surface of the lake was a gigantic dog. His name was Dogzilla, he has been sleeping for a long time. The fireworks were loud and they made Dogzilla wake up out of his sleep. He didn't like being woken up, so he was very tired and mean.

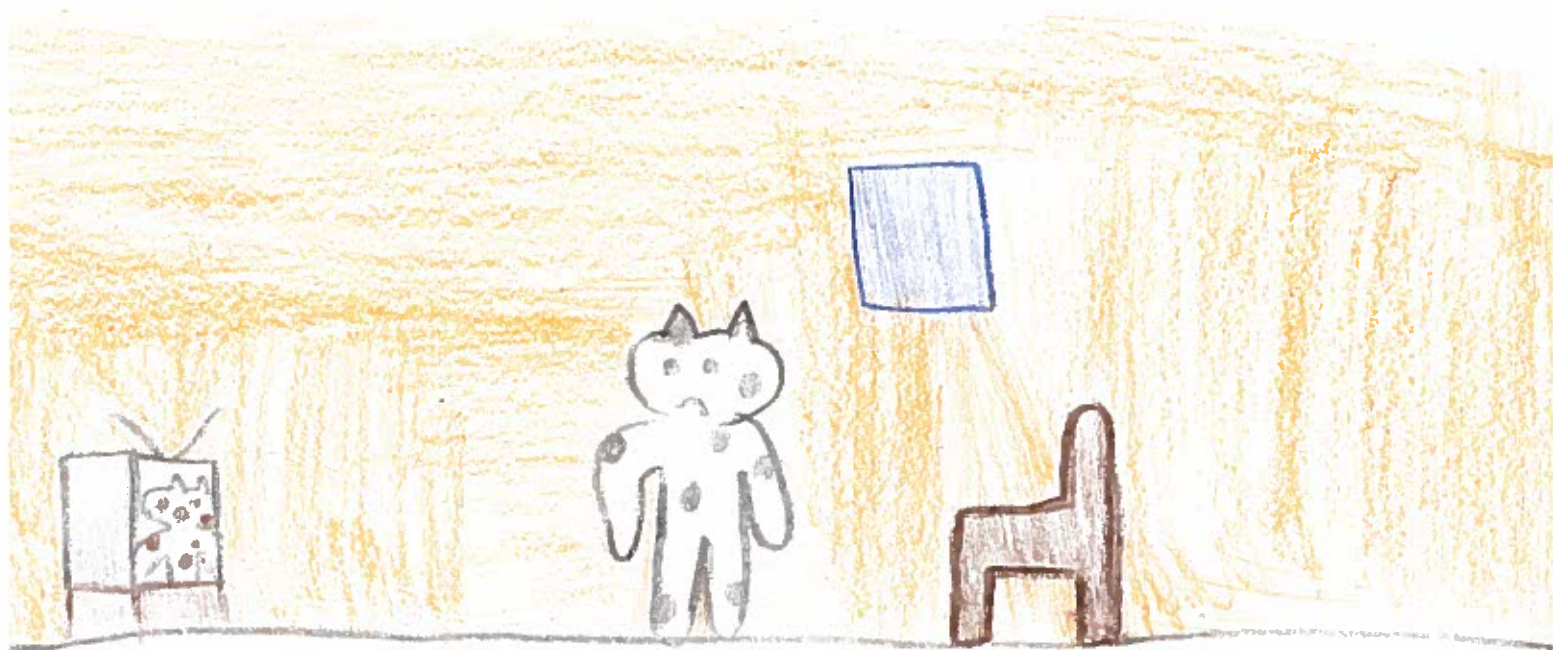

Dogzilla rose up from the waters and made a loud roar. A volcano that was next to the city erupted, shooting out flying dogs every which way. Everyone woke up and was very scared because no one knew what was happening. Felix was making a sandwich while all this was happening.

After the big party all the cats in Cattsburg but one went to sleep, Felix a very cool cat decided to stay up a little later than everyone else. Felix was looking up at the stars on the top of his house. When he heard a monstrous rumble, Felix wasn't very surprised because he didn't eat that much today, he thought it was his stomach rumbling and he went to get something to eat.

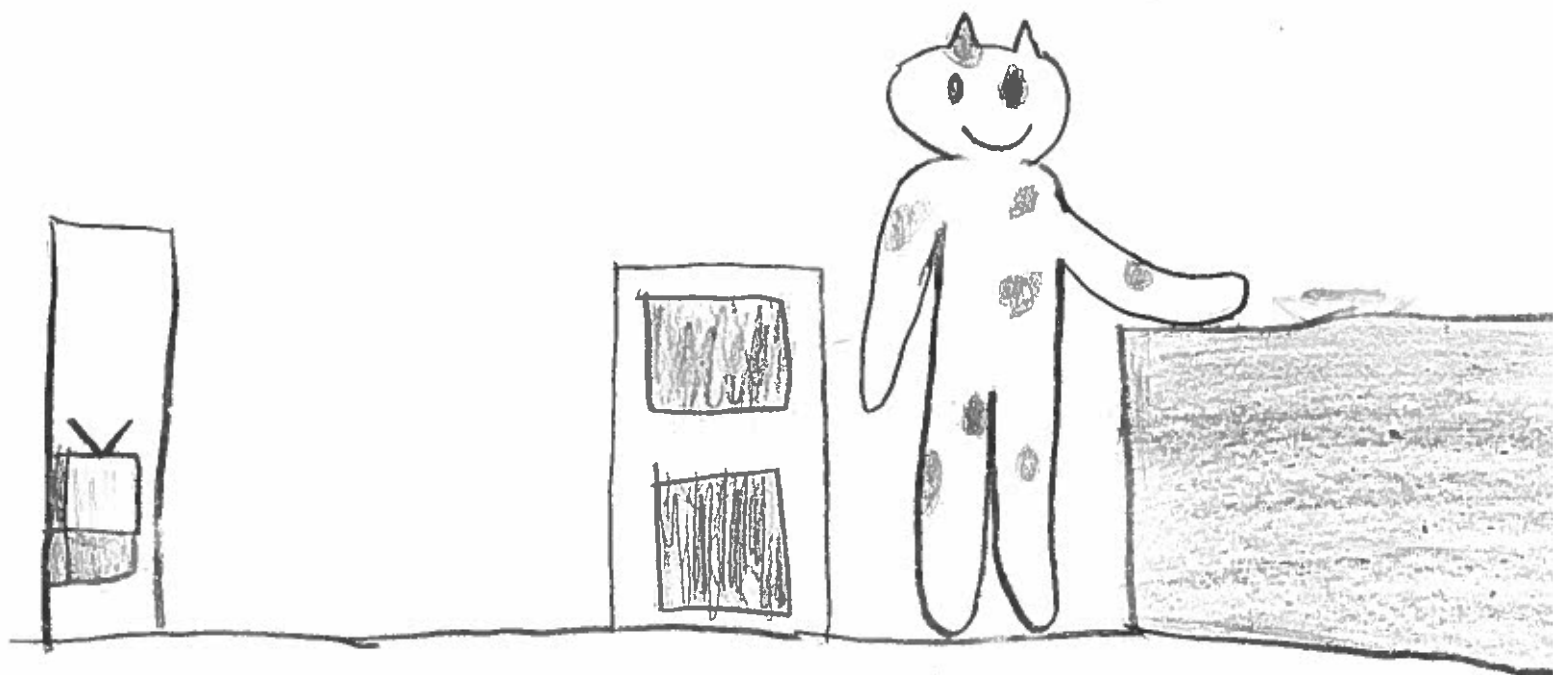

Felix ran out of his house from his kitchen. He stood in awe as he saw a giant dog walking towards the town. Everyone knew if Dogzilla came to the town the results would be cat-astrophic.

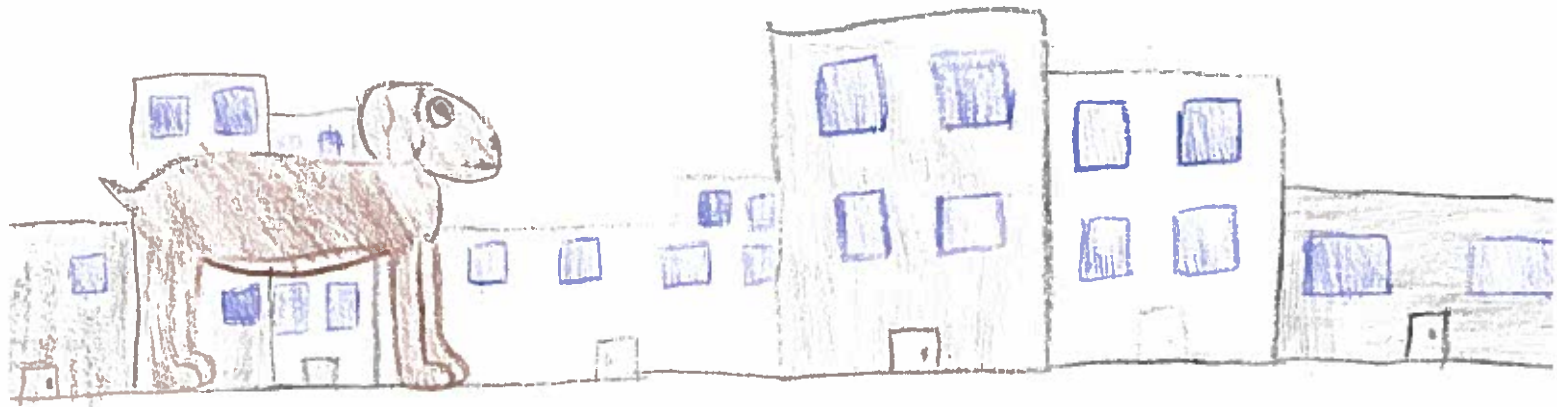

The mayor made a T.V. broadcast that he needs everyone needs to help fight against Dogzilla. Felix didn't like fighting, he thought there must be a better way to calm the dog. He started to work on a plan.

The Air Force started flying at Dogzilla. Dogzilla didn't like all these planes flying next to him. He started swatting the planes. Most giant dogs don't like being bothered after they wake up.

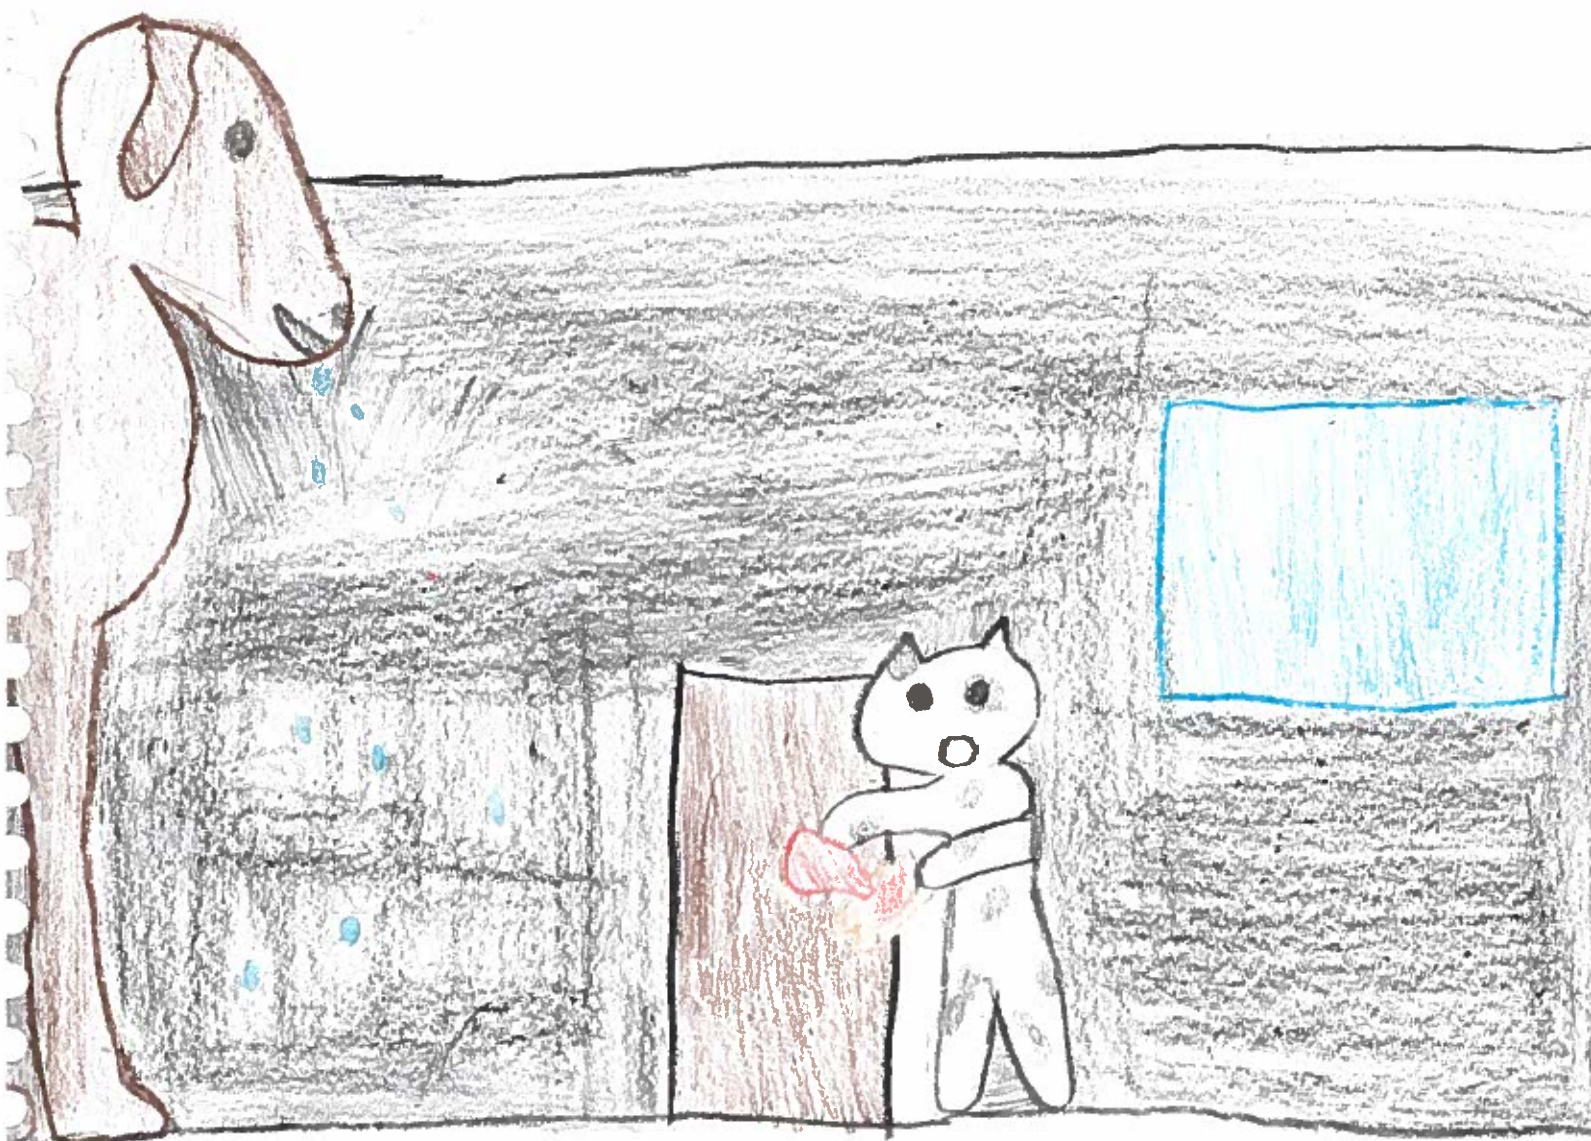

"Eureka," screamed Felix "I have a purr-fect Idea!" Felix walked to his kitchen and went to work on making a sandwich. "Maybe he is just hungry" Felix said. He started to make a ham and cheese sandwich.

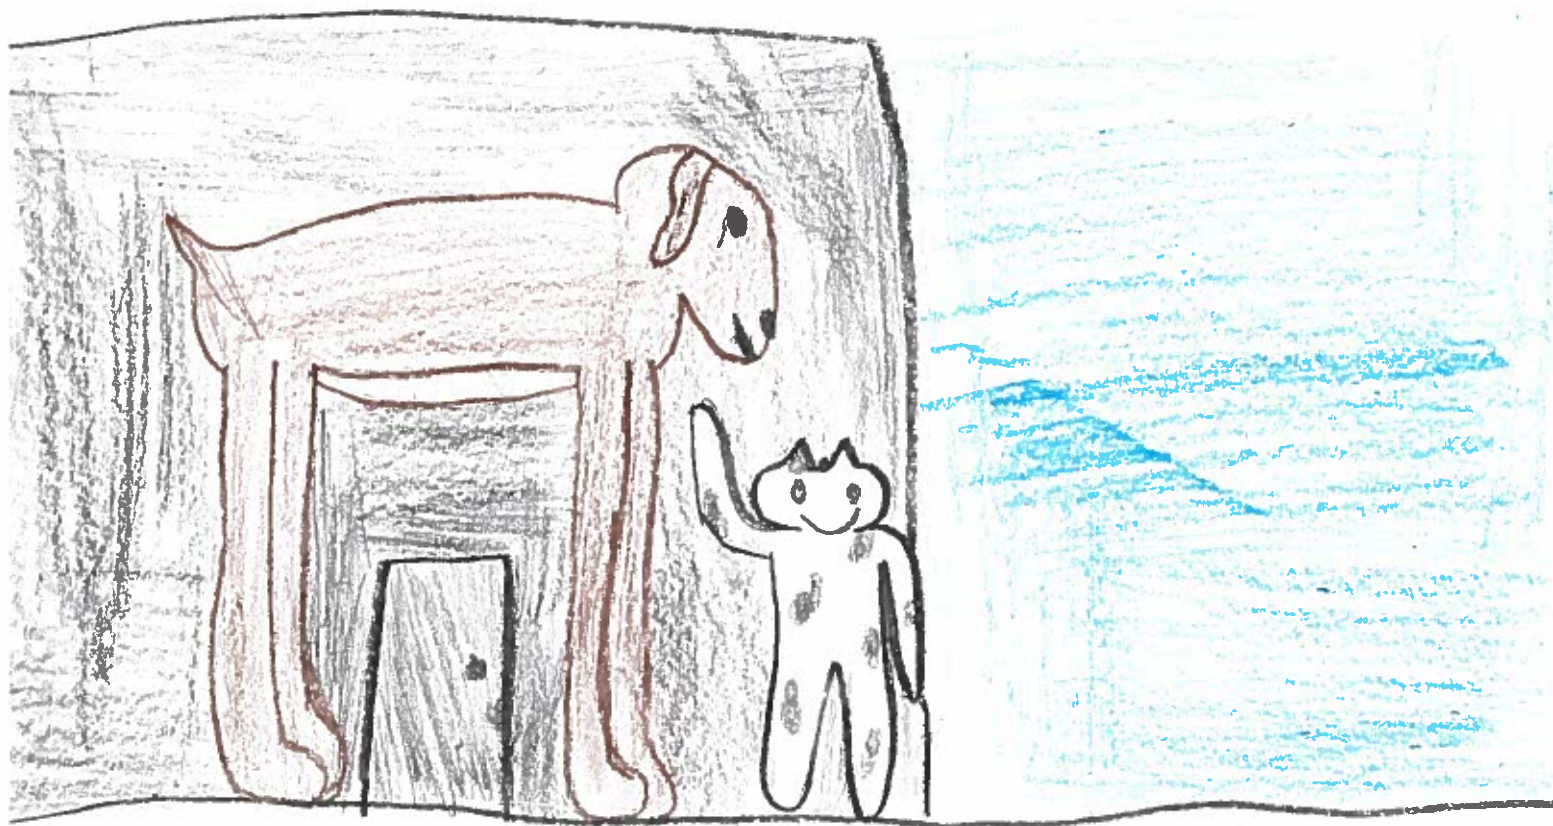

Dogzilla was starting to get annoyed. So many people were bothering him. Most of all he is really hungry; sleeping for a thousand years does that to a dog. Dogzilla lurched closer and closer to the center of the city.

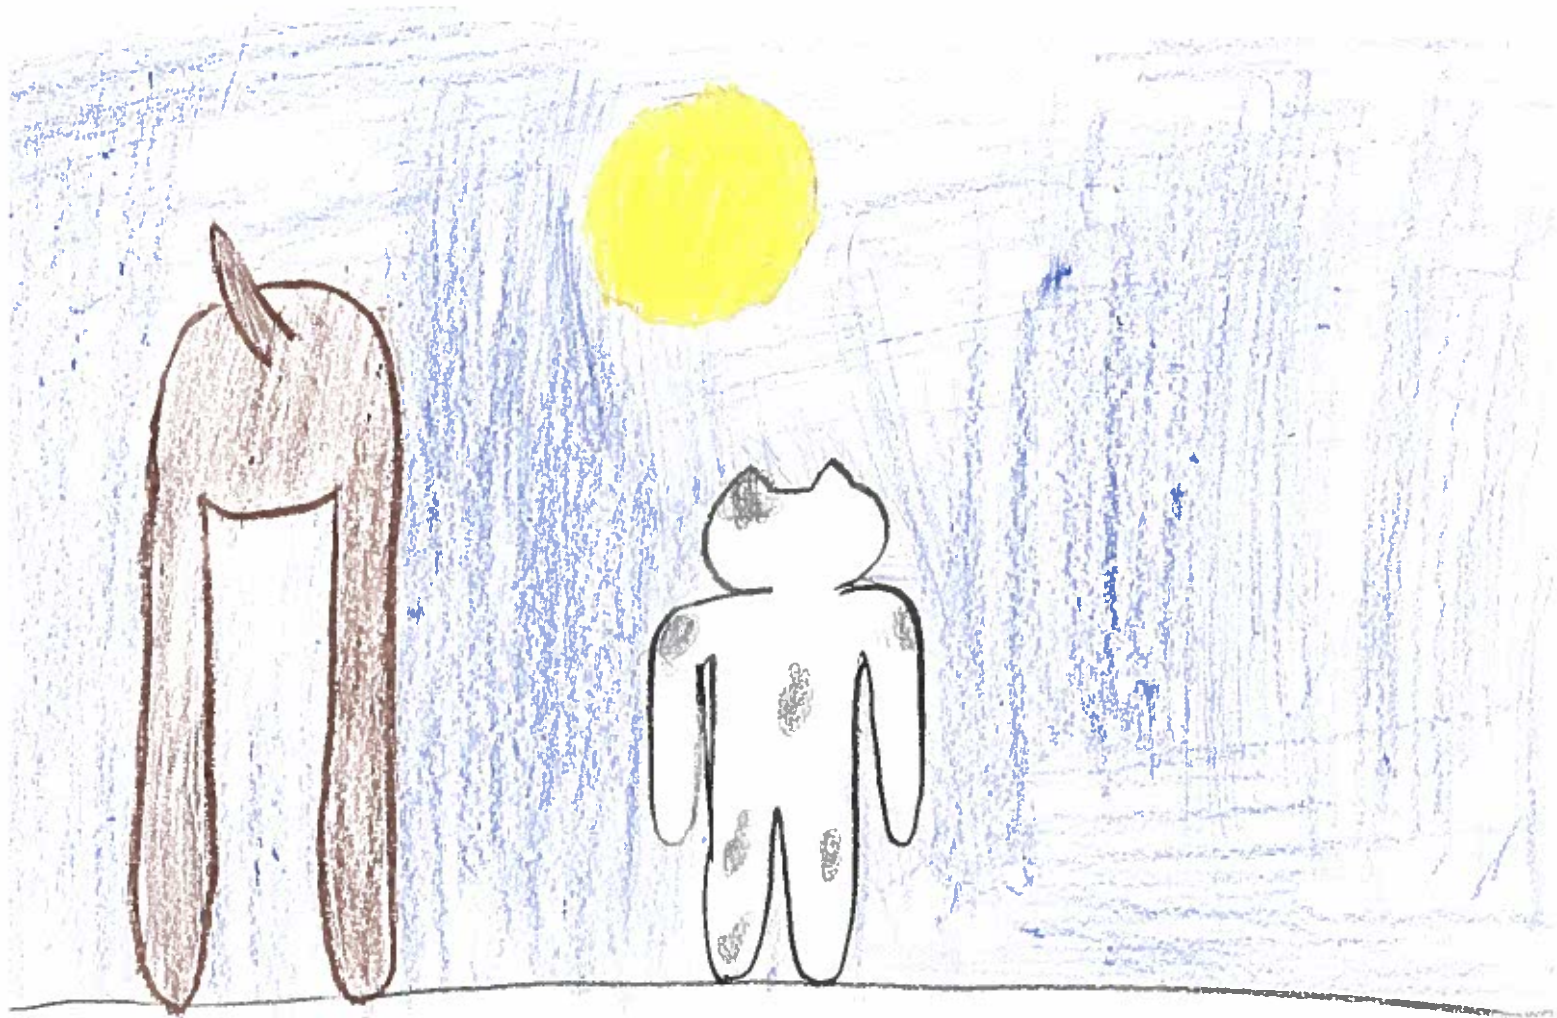

Felix was almost finished with his sandwich, and then he realized he didn't have any catsup. He put the sandwich in a bag and ran to the grocery store. Felix asked the store manager, "do you have any catsup?", She nodded and showed him to an aisle. Felix searched for it and he finally found the catsup.

He poured a helping of catsup on the sandwich as he walked away from the store. "If this doesn't make him happy I don't know what will," Felix exclaimed. At that moment a giant furry paw landed right next to him. Slobber started dropping every where.

Felix looked up and saw Dogzilla standing over him. "Who's a good boy?," Felix asked as he waved the sandwich over his head "Want a treat?". Dogzilla stood silently. Felix shook in his boots. Then Dogzilla let out a loud roar, and quickly devoured the sandwich.

Dogzilla was happy and had a full belly. It turned out that he really liked catsup too, he rolled over once, ate the sandwich, and wagged his tail. The cats decided to have a party to welcome their new furry friend, They played games and danced. Felix asked asked Dogzilla if he wanted to live with him. Dogzilla barked and Felix knew he said, "yes", and they walked off into the sunset.
